Attendees of this year's CLEW will enjoy accommodations at The Newbury, a true Boston landmark blending timeless elegance with modern sophistication. First opened in 1927 as one of the original Ritz-Carlton hotels in the United States, The Newbury has been thoughtfully reimaged by three world-renowned designers into the stunning 286-room property it is today.

Perfectly positioned at the entrance of Newbury Street and directly overlooking the Boston Common, the hotel offers the ideal balance of world-class shopping, historic charm, and serene green space—placing the best of Boston right at your doorstep. Inside, The Newbury is every bit as exceptional as its location. Guest rooms and suites feature plush bedding, elegant furnishings, luxurious bathrooms stocked with Byredo amenities, and, in some suites, working fireplaces that create an unforgettable stay. Beyond the rooms, the hotel's glamorous lobby, stately fitness center, and intimate guest-only library lounge—complete with a fireplace and curated book collection—elevate every moment.

From its storied history and impeccable design to its exceptional dining and unmatched location, The Newbury offers a luxurious retreat—a place where comfort, style, and Boston's rich character all come together.
